I am making a game and in it's most simple form, the enemy sprite class looks like this: public class Enemy extends Actor { private TextureRegion enemyTR; private Sprite enemySprite; private Vector2 enemyLocation = new Vector2(160.0f, -160.0f); private Vector2 enemyVelocity = new Vector2(0.0f, -3.0f); public Enemy() { enemyTR = new TextureRegion(Gdx.files.internal("Enemy.png")); enemySprite = new Sprite(enemyTR); enemySprite.setPosition(enemyLocation); enemySprite.setSize(enemySprite.getWidth() * 2, enemySprite.getHeight() * 2); } } I have a background screen that is 300x500. On the top of this background screen, I have a sprite that is 50x50. In LibGDX's HelloWorld example, I see the code: stage.addActor(new Sprite(Gdx.files.internal("star.png"))); stage.addActor(new Sprite(Gdx.files.internal("background.png"))); The stage is set up to draw everything at (0,0), it also has a renderer. I would like to position my enemy sprite so that it is in the top-left corner of my background sprite (50x50), but I need help doing so with the code.
